Notes	From RADIANT Deliverable 6.1: The strongest competition for lentils in the European market is from large-scale suppliers from Canada, the USA and Turkey. Lentils arrive in Europe through importers specialised in sourcing, trading and/or managing local brands. In Europe, most lentils are sold through supermarkets. Catering establishments (such as restaurants), ethnic stores and street markets offer lentils but are smaller segments. Online sales through web shops are increasing, especially in northern Europe. Retail prices for dried lentils in Europe are between 1.5 and 3 euros per kg and 3 to 5 euros for organic lentils. Pricing depends on variety, package size, brand and country
